ACAC Re-accredits Certification Programs

To complete its 2016 activities, the American Council for Accredited Certification (ACAC) filed re-accreditation applications with the Council of Engineering and Scientific Specialty Boards (CESB) and the National Commission for Certifying Agencies (NCCA), as required by the policies of those organizations. ACAC maintains third-party accreditation for more than twenty certification programs in environmental and related fields.

“Maintaining third party accreditation is one of our most important jobs,” said Charlie Wiles, ACAC executive director. “It ensures that our certifications remain the most reliable in the industry.”

Third-party accreditation involves independent verification of performance statistics for a certification program, including psychometric analysis of the examination. ACAC has maintained CESB accreditation since 2006 and NCCA accreditation since 2014, making it the only organization with indoor air quality certifications that have earned dual accreditation.
